

USING MATHS IN...

ELECTRICAL

WHAT YOU'LL NEED TO KNOW...

- You will need to be able to calculate customer quotations and invoices accurately.
- You'll be required to work to a time schedule so you become a reliable electrician.
- Quick arithmetic is essential when working on-site to calculate design specifications.

Without these skills you could be limiting your opportunity to progress in your career.

Starting salary £4.15 an hour.

Fully-qualified electricians can earn up to
£37,000 a year.

*these figures are a national guide only

So don't miss out on your GCSE and functional skills maths classes identified on your timetable.

USING ENGLISH IN...

ELECTRICAL

WHAT YOU'LL NEED TO KNOW...

- To take customer requirements and put them into practice your communication and listening skills need to be professional with the correct use of language and terminology to ensure you can bring the plans to fruition.
- You need to communicate with customers over the telephone, by email and social media so you need to speak and write in a professional manner, with correct use of spelling and grammar.
- To be able to understand technical terms in specifications and understand architects drawings.
- In order to acquire work you must have good listening skills and you need to be professional with the correct use of language to communicate with your customers.
- You need to communicate with customers over the telephone, by email and social media so you need to speak and write in a professional manner, with correct use of spelling and grammar.
- To be able to understand electrical terms on manufacturers' instructions relating to the products you are installing.
- To be able to read a detailed customer specification.
- To be able to write a detailed quotation/invoice.

Without these skills you could be limiting your opportunity to progress in your career.

Starting salary £4.15 an hour.

Fully-qualified electricians can earn up to
£37,000 a year.

*these figures are a national guide only

So don't miss out on your GCSE and functional skills English classes identified on your timetable.